First of all, double-grooved acrylic sheets have excellent transparency. Its high transparency enables light to pass through almost unobstructed, thereby providing a clear and bright visual effect. Whether used in display Windows or lighting equipment, it can demonstrate excellent optical performance. Secondly, it has good weather resistance. It can maintain stable performance under different climatic conditions, is not easily affected by factors such as temperature, humidity and ultraviolet rays, and will not fade, deform or become brittle even after long-term use.

Furthermore, the strength of double-grooved acrylic sheets is relatively high. Compared with ordinary glass, it has better impact resistance and is less likely to break when subjected to external force impact, thereby enhancing the safety during use.

In addition, the double-groove design enhances the convenience of its installation and fixation. This special groove structure makes the acrylic sheet more stable during installation, less likely to loosen or shift.
